SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

FDA is announcing the availability of a final guidance for industry entitled “Rare Diseases: Considerations for the Development of Drugs and Biological Products.” This guidance is intended to assist sponsors of drugs and biological products for treatment of rare diseases in conducting efficient and successful product development programs through a discussion of selected issues commonly encountered in rare disease drug development. This final guidance addresses important aspects of drug and biological product development to support the proposed clinical investigation(s), including nonclinical pharmacology/toxicology; trial design and endpoint considerations to ensure quality and interpretability of data; standard of evidence to establish safety and effectiveness; and drug manufacturing considerations during drug development.

This guidance finalizes the draft guidance entitled “Rare Diseases: Common Issues in Drug Development” issued February 1, 2019 (84 FR 1156). Changes made from the draft to the final guidance took into consideration comments received. Major changes include the removal of the natural history section (because this is addressed in a separate guidance), additional considerations regarding nonclinical studies, information on the use of external controls and early randomization, a section discussing safety considerations, information on changes to drug substance or manufacturing process, and sections discussing participation of patients/patient groups in drug development programs and pediatric considerations in rare disease drug development.

This guidance is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The guidance represents the current thinking of FDA on “Rare Diseases: Considerations for the Development of Drugs and Biological Products.” It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations.
